Quebec City's 400th birthday

Local rock- and ice-climbing guru Francois-Guy Thivierge will try to take a similar flag to the summit of Everest in March, with a small team of Quebecers and a Nepalese sherpa.

For Thivierge, it was a unique chance to achieve a lifelong dream.

"I want to pay homage to explorers who crossed the ocean, who lived a hard life," said Thivierge.

Thivierge, an energetic man with Popeye forearms, expressed regret that Quebec City's 400th bash is approaching unnoticed in Canada and with a good dose of skepticism, even in Quebec City.

"It should be a celebration for all French-Canadians, but also all Canadians, he said.

"It just seems like some people live with black clouds, they see them everywhere."
